

Complex businesses deserve simple stories.

You may already have a powerful story. But is your narrative earning trust?
I help Founders, CEOs and CMOs build a simple positioning architecture.

People understand you
People remember you
People trust you

I build all three, in that order

Business communication that changes
how your stakeholders perceive you.

Across all my roles in the last two decades, three questions remain constant.

The market has often called this marketing. It has never really been marketing. I have been brought in whenever an organisation needed to answer a specific class of question, and the job title changed while the question did not.

- 01 How should we be perceived?
- 02 How do we earn trust before we have earned proof?
How do we make people believe before they buy?
- 03 How do we align founders, investors, customers,
employees and government behind one narrative?

For an organization, these questions tend to arise for various reasons/stages, with a few key ones being:

- We are becoming too complex to explain.
- Nobody understands what we actually do.
- We acquired another company.
- We are raising capital / preparing for IPO.
- We are entering new markets.
- We need a corporate narrative that holds.

Four ways my work takes shape

01

Strategic Narrative

- Positioning
- Messaging architecture
- Category design
- Corporate story
- Founder story

02

Trust & Reputation

- Corporate comms
- PR and media
- Thought leadership
- Government and policy
- Executive positioning

03

Growth Enablement

- Website and digital
- Sales narratives
- Investor comms
- Employer brand
- Launches, integrations

04

Execution Partner

- Monthly counsel
- Leadership workshops
- Pre-release reviews
- High-stakes moments
- Board communication

Five stages of engagement scope

STAGE	FOCUS	WHAT IT LOOKS LIKE
I • Zero to one	Building	No narrative yet: Positioning, corporate story, first language
II • One to ten	Optimizing	A narrative exists but drifts across channels. Audit, sharpen, install the standard, mentor the team.
III • Plateau	Accelerating	The story stopped working. Reposition, re-segment, rebuild the proof sequence, reset the measures.
IV • Point problem	Troubleshooting	One announcement, one launch, one crisis, one question you keep answering badly. Time-bound, high stakes.
V • Leadership gap	Transitioning	Interim communication leadership while you hire. Hold the standard, define the role, hand over cleanly.

You cannot out-execute a bad perception. Clarity is not a communication skill. It is a thinking skill that happens to be visible.

My Unconventional Journey

Structured thinking. Strategic storytelling. Relentless execution.

For 18 years, I have shaped how complex organizations are understood, turning heavy engineering, deep tech, and high-stakes strategy into market influence.

Every business has a story. Few have a narrative that earns trust.
